Contract Name	Education Content: Engaging young people into Cardano governance
Milestone Name	Project Plan and Design
Acceptance Criteria
<ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Project Management Plan published including tasks and team roles assigned.</li><li>2. Publish Learning Design Documents.</li></ol>
What & How
&lt;brief description of what has been delivered and how the criteria has been met&gt; A project plan was created, filled out accordingly and discussed with the two teams. Each team fills specific roles within the project, which is reflected in a brief description of the roles in the project plan. Thereby ensuring that asynchronous work can be done and specific team members can be contacted if necessary. Milestone descriptors were created to give an overview of the action items, goals and the deliverables and were adjusted through feedback rounds with both teams. Similarly the timeline was set up in coordination with the main team members responsible for the creation of the content. The learning design was created by the Education and Research lead with an pedagogical and educational framework and adjusted based on feedback from team members.

Quality/Testing
Both the project plan and the learning design were iterated after gathering feedback from the relevant team members. The learning design is based on pedagogical and educational principles, while the structure was also iterated after feedback. It was compiled and adjusted through iteration, starting with a broad and general framework based on the work of MAV100, while in the first design step being concretised for aspects and focus of decentralized technologies, decentralized governance and related focal points.
Communication
The learning design can be shared with the community, and also mentioned as a template for other learning projects, regardless of content, especially its pedagogical and educational principles (Topic, Learning Objectives, Modality, Skills, Goals) which are at the base of the design, ie. the diagram is the most concise format that can be shown and communicated: Diagram: Social / societal path to governance action (on-chain/CIP1694)
